

MOCKUP REVIEW NOTES

Creative Director: Dominique Senteza

Designer: Lauren Fox

WHAT WAS DISCUSSED:

What Lauren has done so far is get the information all on the mockups with text to accompany each album and background information about the artist. She plans on changing direction by having all three album covers displayed on a home screen with :hover implemented on each one to change the background color of the page when the user mouses over each one respectively. They may also possibly replace the navigation bar and display the text for each album when clicked.

NOTES:

We talked about how it might be difficult to incorporate Marina's background info into this new layout. Here are two possible solutions:

1. Increasing the width of the bio paragraph and put the text under the row of albums
2. Use the image of Marina that you currently have at the bottom corner of the home screen as a link to a separate bio page

Try and play with the typeface of the album and release date information. They seem kind of out of place.

If the hove and click method does not work. You can keep separate pages per album. But change the backgrounds to match their vibes (I like that the home page is black though).

Experiment with adding a drop-down to the navigation bar. Maybe just show "Home" and "Albums," and when the user mouses over "Albums" a drop-down that lists each one pops up. This might help further simplify the appearance of the navigation bar if you decide to keep it.